Note	Explanation
secrecy	These input fields may not be released according to officially agreed confidentiality guidelines. This includes the regulatory and auxiliary variables (e.g. names or addresses) not included in the standard file	The standardized on-site file of the microcensus includes all of the survey characteristics (but no order or methodological variables like names) with full sample-size, but only structured to the regional layers in the depth of regional information. Any data not contained in the standard file are more deeply structured characteristics that are not recorded to the data set for confidentiality reasons.
not usable	This data can not be evaluated and therefore are not included in the record.
RESERVE	These input field numbers are reserved for future microcensuses. Since no data are available, they are not included in the data set.
only use input field-no.	Also referred to as „identical with input-field-no “ These fields are self-generated; they are completely identical with the respectively named input-field. To avoid any problems or confusion (for example: The variable state exists once alphabetically and once sorted after countries code) these fields are taken from the data set.
year not assigned	These input fields are reserved for certain questions that were only part of the survey program in other microcensus years. These fields do not contain data, so they are placeholders.
